Abstract

This research was aimed at knowing what extent EFL students' reading habit and the factors that contribute. The respondents were 50 students of English Departmentt from the 6th semester. The method used was descriptive-quantitative methode. However, questionnaire and interview were used to collect the data.

This study found that the highest frequency was in fair category as much as 38 students. It is followed by bad category which was gotten by 7 students. Then, in good category there were only 5 students. In addition, for the factors that contribute to the reading habit, there are about 48% of the students who have motivation to read only because their lecturers assigned them to read texts. While it is about 68% of the students show that they have various preferences of what books they read whether it is fiction as well as non fiction. Interestingly, 98% of the students' purpose to read is all to improve their English skills.
